What is Hypoglycemia?

Our bodies require glucose as a main energy source. Pumping through the bloodstream, glucose supplies the body's trillion cells with energy. Just as a car starts to putter out as gas runs out, the body reacts with a number of unpleasant symptoms when glucose levels become low.

Hypoglycemia is the medical term used to describe low blood sugar levels and the symptoms that follow. Rather than an actual disease itself, Hypoglycemia is a syndrome which is indicative of another health problem, and while it is most commonly associated with diabetes, there are a number of other conditions that can result in low blood sugar levels.

Diagnosing Hypoglycemia

Hypoglycemia needs to be tested while symptoms are present. While some people experience hypoglycemia symptoms during their initial doctor's consultation, many people have to make an appointment at a later date after a period of fasting (a few hours or more depending on the severity of your symptoms).

Your physician can then do a blood test to determine if you have abnormally low blood sugar. If this is found to be true, your doctor may also recommend further tests to determine what underlying condition could be responsible for the hypoglycemia symptoms. Your doctor will also check that your symptoms disappear when your glucose levels are increased.

What are the Symptoms of Hypoglycemia?

When blood sugar levels drop, the body releases extra adrenaline into the bloodstream to help increase glucose levels. This is the body's initial attempt to protect against the severe effects of hypoglycemia, and the result is the initial milder hypoglycemic symptoms. When the brain becomes starved of energy supplying glucose, more severe brain symptoms can arise which, if left untreated, can be serious. Hypoglycemia symptoms generally resolve once glucose levels have been restored to normal.

- pale complexion
- sweaty
- extreme hunger
- shakiness
- anxiety
- heart palpitations
- headache
blurred or double vision
fatigue and weakness confusion
seizures and loss of consciousness (coma) in rare serious cases

What Causes Hypoglycemia?

Hypoglycemia is most commonly caused by diabetes, although other conditions may also result in decreased blood sugar levels.

Conditions that Can Cause Hypoglycemia

- Side effects of certain medications
- Excessive alcohol
- Certain cancers
- Anorexia
- Diarrhea
- Serious illnesses such as kidney failure, liver disease or heart problems
- Insulinoma
- Hereditary fructose intolerance
- Hormonal deficiencies
- Early stages of pregnancy
- Prolonged fasting
- Long periods of strenuous exercise

Help for Hypoglycemia

Treatment of hypoglycemia usually involves taking necessary short-term steps to increase your blood glucose level back into the normal range, and taking the necessary steps to identify the appropriate treatment.

The short-term treatment of hypoglycemia generally includes the intake of sugar or glucose tablets. If symptoms have progressed to a more serious level you may need intravenous glucose or an injection of glucagon.

Natural Remedies for Diabetes

Because hypoglycemia is a symptom rather than a disease, it is important to tackle the underlying cause. For many people, hypoglycemia is directly related to diabetes or another insulin-related condition. When this is the case, some commonly recommended herbs are Gymnema sylvestre, Galega officinalis and Bilberry.

These are a few herbs that have proven successful in the control and treatment of hypoglycemia, while the mineral Chromium Picolinate has been proven to improve the effectiveness of insulin. Along with the correct lifestyle changes, herbal remedies and dietary recommendations can reduce or eliminate the need for prescription medication and can also aid in preventing tissue and organ damage associated with uncontrolled blood sugar levels.

• Keep meal times regular and don’t skip meals, especially if you are on any glucose lowering medication.
• Keep fit and keep up with the regular exercise, but make sure to snack on something before hand.
• Make provisions for “just in case situations” or the times you know you may not be able to eat at your usual time by taking a snack or meal along with you.
• Avoid intake of simple sugars where you can. These cause a sharp and sudden increase in your blood sugar levels, followed by an equally sharp and sudden decrease which can result in hypoglycemia. Rather focus on adequate regular intake of complex carbohydrates which will provide a more steady supply of energy.
• Get advice from a dietician or your health care practitioner about any diet modifications you need to make to keep your sugar levels steady.
• Keep a record of when you get hypoglycemia and the events that precede it - then adapt your lifestyle accordingly and take the necessary steps to rectify it.
• Be prepared and always treat at the first sign of low blood sugar as soon as it arises so that you can avoid serious situations.

The Natural Approach

While Western medicine has become the norm in many cultures, it is not the only treatment option. Conventional western medicine, often called allopathic medicine, is the system of medicine taught at most medical schools and most pharmaceutical and synthetic medicines are manufactured and marketed according to the principles of allopathic medicine. Allopathic medicine is also sometimes called orthodox medicine.

Because most of us in the Western world have grown up in a society in which allopathic medicine is the prevailing norm, we forget that, only a few decades ago, homeopathic, herbal and other natural medicines were commonly available – and freely used even by conventional doctors. While there are often heated debates about which system of medicine is ‘better’ than the other, many responsible doctors (whether they are allopathic or not) recognize that both have a role to play in the treatment program.

Natural medicine has often been frowned on by conventional doctors, especially by those who did not have sufficient knowledge of these medicines. However, it is encouraging to note that some medical schools are now beginning to re-introduce it into their course work, thereby providing doctors with a wider range of treatment options from which to choose. In many countries, especially in Europe, India and China, natural and homeopathic medicines are commonly prescribed by conventional doctors and represent a significant part of the total annual drug sales.

Naturopathy is a branch of medicine (just as allopathy is a branch of medicine) which operates according to the underlying philosophy that the body has an innate capacity to heal itself. While natural medicines are often called ‘alternative’ or ‘complimentary’ medicines, they are, in fact, a unique and independent form of medicine in their own right, well able to treat a variety of conditions. Perhaps the term ‘holistic’ medicine is more apt, given the broad range of treatment options and approaches which are to be found within the practice of natural medicine, which encompasses many different disciplines, including herbalism, homeopathy, iridology, osteopathy, chiropractic, therapeutic massage techniques, aromatherapy, acupuncture and many, many more.

Most naturopaths will use a variety of treatment modalities in order to treat their patients in a holistic way to support health, relieve symptoms and prevent future disease. In fact, even the World Health Organization defines health as being "...more than simply the absence of illness. It is the active state of physical, emotional, mental and social well-being." This is a wonderfully clear description of holistic or natural medicine, which strives to support health (thereby relieving or preventing symptoms), rather than simply eliminating disease.

Although allopathic medicine certainly has a role to play and has made a tremendous contribution to medical science during the past century, there is a growing perception that it is not the only answer and that, in many cases, holistic medicine can accomplish just as much, if not more – without the risk of side effects, addiction and sacrifice to health so commonly associated with pharmaceutical drugs. Contrary to common perception, and provided that they are manufactured in the correct way, natural medicines can work quickly and safely to promote healing.

In many cases, they can succeed where pharmaceutical drugs have failed. Despite frequent reports that they are ‘unproven’ and ‘untested’, the opposite is true. Natural medicines have a long history of usage and there is a wealth of empirical evidence to support their effectiveness and safety. In addition, active clinical research is carried out by many academic hospitals and universities to support the extensive traditional and empirical evidence behind natural medicines.

It is also important to know that, like any medicine, herbal and homeopathic medicines must be manufactured in the correct way, following acceptable procedures and manufacturing methods to ensure maximum effectiveness and safety. Due to the recent rise in popularity of natural remedies, many companies have sprung up to take advantage of the market. Unfortunately not all of them are equipped to manufacture to the correct standards, often resulting in a flood of inferior (and sometimes even unsafe) remedies onto the market – giving natural remedies a bad name.

Even some pharmaceutical companies have rushed to claim their market share by producing so-called ‘standardized’ extracts of herbs and offering these as superior to the tried and tested methods of naturopathic manufacturing. Nothing could be further from the truth. While ‘standardized’ extracts may offer benefit of easy consistency of dosage (and cheaper more efficient production lines), they have grave disadvantages. These include an increase in side effects as the medicines produced in this manner lose the natural protective properties of the herbs. In some cases, these side effects have proved fatal – as was seen in the liver toxicity associated with standardized extracts of kava kava, a herb previously safely used for generations without any known side effects.

Most naturopaths recommend what is called the Full Spectrum Method of extraction – which retains the benefits of ALL the active ingredients within the herb as opposed to isolating only one – thereby providing a more complete treatment as well as superior protection against side effects.

Whatever your choice, always choose wisely. Research what is best for you. If you have a chronic or life threatening condition, don’t make changes without first discussing them with your doctor in order that your condition may be monitored. Well informed and supportive practitioners will support patients who want to take

Common Questions Asked About Holistic Health Distance Learning Courses:

What is Certification?

Most schools will offer an exam that tests the student's knowledge of the material taught in the respective course. Upon successful completion of this exam, a Certificate or Diploma will be issued by the school attesting that the student has successfully met the requirements as specified by that school. The only governmental recognition of Aromatherapy in North America is the occupational title designation granted to the BCAOA under the Societies Act of British Columbia.

What is a Certified Aromatherapist or Reflexologist?

Most prospective students want to know whether taking our courses will lead to their becoming 'Certified' in that healing modality, thereby leading to the title of Certified Aromatherapist, Certified Reflexologist or Certified Color/Crystal Therapist. The answer to this really depends on what you mean by 'Certified.” We believe it can be misleading to purport that completing a course in a healing modality such as reflexology, aromatherapy or color/crystal therapy will lead to a designation of 'Certified' Therapist. These are not official title designations nor are they ones which are recognized by any country's governmental body. All that these titles mean is that this is what an Individual Instructor, School or Institution decided to put on the Diploma it awards those who successfully complete their course.

What is an accredited course in Aromatherapy or Reflexology?

The answer to this will depend on who you are asking. At the present time, British Columbia is the only government to recognize Aromatherapy as a distinct profession and has granted Occupational Title Protection to the members of the BCAOA (British Columbia Alliance of Aromatherapy) with the exclusive right for its members to call themselves Registered Aromatherapists (R.A.).

At this time, neither Reflexology nor Color/Crystal Therapy have such occupational designations in any country although one prominent Reflexology school in Colorado, The Modern Institute of Reflexology, has gained occupational designation for their institution in that state. MIR has been designated by the Colorado State Division of Private Occupational Schools - Dept. of Higher Education as an approved school. Our Reflexologist who developed the reflexology modules for our courses was trained at MIR as a Certified Reflexologist, a Master Reflexologist and a Dr. of Reflexology.

In the United States, the NAHA (National Association for Holistic Aromatherapy) has put into place their Approved Standards for Aromatherapy Training. The Alternative Healing Academy's Advanced Aromatherapy course meets and exceeds these standards and we are in the application process of becoming an approved program through the NAHA.

In Canada, there are a number of different Associations including the BCAPA (British Columbia Association of Practicing Aromatherapists) and the CFA (Canadian Federation of Aromatherapists). Time will tell if one authoritative body or association becomes the standard by which to judge and govern the educational offerings of these alternative healing modalities.

It has to be noted that NO form of aromatherapy "certification" is currently recognized in the USA by anyone other than those in the trade, nor is aromatherapy (or essential oils in the aromatherapy trade) regulated by any governmental body.

Course Testimonials

"I'm done! Going through the final and the case studies and having such amazing experiences and opportunities to help people, I truly feel blessed and honored to have had the intense education that came with this course. I discovered in me a new ability to serve others, not only through education but through the power of healing that comes with the use of essential oils. I am continuing to train personally with Alexandria Brighton and have begun work toward opening an aromatherapy practice. Thank you so much for your patience and knowledge. Most of all thank you for this new way of living and enjoying Life."

- A. Lindquist - Advanced Aromatherapy Practitioner

"I am finding the course great. It is written very well so even people like me can understand the human body a whole lot better. I just hope that I can remember it all. I don't think I have a chance of remembering the names of everything in the muscular system or the movement system. But, I do have more of an understanding of how everything works now. I find it just amazing. Thanks Heaps."

- M. Oliver - Basic Anatomy & Physiology

"This information is great that you are teaching. I would really like to talk my oldest daughter into taking your course. It really goes into detail which is very informative."

- Debbie F. - Basic Reflexology

"Seven years ago I started to see a reflexologist for migraines and sinus problems. I was amazed that I finally found relief without medication. I decided this year to search out a course in reflexology so I could help family and friends and show them the benefits of reflexology. I researched various courses on the internet and decided to go with the basic course through the Alternative Healing Academy. I was impressed with course material and the ease of receiving the course material.

"I was given an option of having a CD sent to me or to receiving and sending back the assignments through email. I choose email. I received 3 lessons at a time that I could read and study on my own time frame and return the lessons when I was done. Everything was sent in a very timely manner and communication was open and quick. If I needed help, I knew it was only a click away and the response time was very quick. The techniques used also came in a video mode in the email that I could replay as much as I needed to.

"I felt I learned a lot and am able to help myself and others. Being able to log 20 hours of treatment time and writing the case histories for the final exam was extremely rewarding and helpful. I would recommend this course to others interested in reflexology because the course material was very informative and complete and written in easy to understand language."

- Jean Russell - Basic Reflexology Course

"I'm so excited about (the Advanced Aromatherapy course) and I'm particularly excited about the possibility of making custom blends for people! I hadn't anticipated having that opportunity when I took the course so I'm excited to have everything done! I'm very excited to have finished. I really enjoyed this course and really appreciate all the work you've put into it! This has been a fabulous jumping off point for me and I'm so glad I took it.

"p.s. I know the boys are much slower at the Reflexology, but my son is loving the classes."
